

A PANELED RECEPTION ROOM.

How to Furnish an Apartment Tastefully and Quietly.

A recent number of The Boston Budget gave a very helpful description of a quiet artistic apartment under the title of a "Paneled Reception Room." Some of the hints and the more essential portion of the letter press are here reproduced:

THE ROOM.

The floor is covered with a carpet of a deep, rich, orange red, in a plain tone. Over this Oriental rug of many dull, soft colors are strewn in great profusion. These afford a pleasing variety and richness of coloring. The walls are paneled to the height of about five feet. They are of dark, polished mahogany, and are enriched by heavy, plain moldings. Above this the mural decoration consists of a wall paper in an inconspicuous design of a conventional whirling dark green and deep yellow tones.

The doors opening from this room are heavily paneled, with bronze hinges of good workmanship. The fireplace is an imposing feature. It is broad, low and arched, and it is surrounded by unglazed tiles of a deep, warm red. Above these runs a band of rich carvings in a Renaissance scroll pattern. On each side of the fireplace panels of different sizes are arranged, while above this carved band a row of small panels is set. The broad, polished shelf overhangs these panels, and has on either side two columns of classic proportions. These in turn hold the broad cornice, which is further supported by rows of painting on the sides and across the top. About half way between the shelf and cornice two small shelves are inserted between the columns. The tiles of the hearth are of a dark olive gray, highly polished.

For a room like the one shown in the illustration, deep orange red hangings should be used, with ash curtains of white, with pale yellow figures. If you have not a broad ledge to your window, you may substitute something equally pretty and appropriate in the way of a long box, fitting the curve of the window and handsomely upholstered with a blue to match the blue of the portiere. You may object to the blue and red as colors unharmonious in color, but you need make no mistakes if you study carefully the many examples of the Japanese in their ceramic decorations.

In the corner by the fireplace a tall vase will make an effective spot of color. The cloisonne jar is a very beautiful specimen of this branch of Japanese industry. This perhaps is of Chinese manufacture, however, and as it may be of some little interest for us to decide from whose hands it originally came, let us examine it closely. It is of a pale blue at the top, with a spray of conventionally treated flowers, in light greens and pinks, on the side. The surface is broken unevenly into spots, the background of which is in some instances white, again of the pale blue, and at the very base of a deep, rich blue, covered by an all over design. The wire which traces the pattern is about one-sixth of an inch in width, which alone would show it to be, after all, the product of Chinese labor. The Japanese vase are almost invariably of a rich, dark green, Indian red and deep blue. The patterns are arrangements of geometrical forms irregularly disposed upon the surface, while the wire shows as a tiny line.

There is one thing which you owe to society, and to feminine society particularly, and that is a clock in your reception room. Every woman wishes, of course, to make her ceremonious call exactly ten minutes in duration. If she is clever, and has taken advantage of long experience, she will be able to arrange the topics of conversation that they will come to the proper climax just as the allotted time is expiring. To the woman, however, who is not endowed with this gift, for it certainly is a talent, a clock is an absolute boon. It should be attractive and lovely in appearance that when her eyes fall upon it she will think as much of its beauty as of its utility. To choose a clock is indeed a difficult matter, they are to be found in such variety of style and material.

There are three supporting a brown figure or group; there are clocks all gilt and clocks all porcelain, and there are the light ones, made to represent Grecian bas-reliefs, with gilt columns and ornaments. The one shown is both elegant and dainty. The face is of gilt, with the figures in white enamel and with black and gold hands. This is framed in Lunsell porcelain with a white ground, on which are strewn garlands and wreaths of flowers in light and varied chintz colors.

Every room which contains a fireplace should also hold a screen. This may be of wood to match the wood work of the room, or of almost any material which the fancy may suggest. It may be tall and folding or small and swinging. The one shown in the sketch has a light gilt frame work with a fairy like design of a wreath and leaves across the top. In this frame is stretched a piece of heavy silk of a deep yellow shade, on which is worked a design in leaves and scrolls. In the center of this pattern the ground-work of a light golden brown, shot with light red.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox has a new poem in which she says: "Lean up against the throne." The advice is good if the throne has not been newly whitewashed. —Pioneer.

FARMERS MAKE A MOVE

Against the Republicans in Dakota, and Ally Themselves With the Democrats.

GRAND FORKS, N. Dak., August 8.—A big surprise awaiting the Republican convention to be held in Fargo August 21. The Farmers' Alliance petitioned the Republican Central Committee to postpone the convention until September 5 or 10, that the tillers of the soil might get through harvesting and have a voice in the deliberations, but their petition has been "laid upon the table," and in retaliation an ultimatum has appeared in the Jamestown Capital, the official organ of the Alliance, that the farmers' organization will defeat the regular Republican ticket if its wishes are not respected.

It now leaks out, through prominent Alliance members, that Stimmel, of Cass, or Fancher, of Stutsman, whichever is the stronger, will be the Alliance "dark horse," and when the convention meets at Fargo, if Allen controls the situation, the farmer members will bolt the convention and put a complete Alliance State ticket in the field, and it will be the aim to nominate a ticket which the Democratic convention can heartily endorse. Every Alliance speaker in North Dakota discusses the Allen-Ordway-Edwards gang in a manner which can not be construed as complimentary. It is a foregone conclusion that Allen will be the nominee of the Republican convention, and if the Alliance sustains its "ultimatum" there will be a fight over State offices in Dakota this fall that will challenge the admiration of the civilized world.

What's the Matter With the J. W. Brant Co.?

"Oh, they are all right," for they have sense enough to know that "quality and quantity" is advertising which the people always appreciate, as proved by the increased sale of Brant's Pulmonary Balsam, since the size of the bottle was doubled.

It is the best remedy sold for all throat and lung troubles, as the many testimonials we have, proves. For further proof get a 50c. size bottle for 25 cents (warranted) of Saur & Balsley.

An Intelligent Dog.

A large dog at one of the Scranton hotels became very much attached to one of the boarders. He got in the habit of following this man in his leisure walks up town, and the boarder liked to have him along. But on a rainy day the dog didn't see the man start out, and the latter had got around the corner before the dog caught sight of him. The big dog was so tickled when he saw that his old companion was not far away that he dashed up and rubbed his great wet side against the gentleman's good clothes. That was a form of boisterous familiarity not to be put up with, and the man spoke harshly to the dog and drove him back. The dog's sensitive nature resented this unkind treatment, for from that day to this the man has never been able to get the dog to walk out with him, although he has done everything he could think of to win back the dog's friendship. He followed the man once, but he did it much against his will and only after his owner had ordered him to. It was thought the spell had been broken, but it hadn't, and he has refused to accompany the man except when his master has commanded him to.

Another illustration of the dog's intelligence is told by the same gentleman. The dog's owner and he were in the reading room one day when the dog strode in and lay down on the carpet. "I won't mention his name or make any motions," said the landlord to his boarder, referring to the dog, "but I'll say something to you in an ordinary tone, and see if he will notice it." Then the landlord added: "I think his place is behind the desk in front of the safe, instead of in this room." The dog seemed to pay no attention to what had been said, but he got up right away, walked slowly through the long hall, pushed the gate open back of the desk and lay down in front of the safe.—Scranton Special to New York Tribune.

Man Changes Little.

Horace's rustic waited for the river to run down. If he could have waited long enough he might have seen its last drop roll by. But human nature is always the same. If one of those whodid when the world was young should return to it now he would not know its cities and its customs; but he would know its children and their loves, its mothers and their hopes, its lovers and their vows. He would not know the old philosophies by their new names, or the old sciences under the modern developments; but he would know the human heart and its ideals as he would know the midnight sky and its constellations.

We are told that ours will one day be a dead planet moving with other dead planets around a cold and darkened sun. That will not matter if love is immortal. A wandering angel, curious of such things, would find amid the ruins of our civilization here and there an infant's toy, a marriage ring, a sculptured cross. "These are tokens," he would say, "of eternity, not of time. They can teach us nothing new in heaven."—New Orleans Biograph.

A Joking Indian.

The Indian has been said to be incapable of joking; but the Maine Indian has apparently degenerated, for here is Joe Susup, of the Penobscot tribe, telling about a log that became wedged under the Ripogonus Falls so that while one end was in the water the other was striking against the ledge with such force and rapidity as to catch fire.—Lewiston Journal.

"Saved by Faith."

A druggist's wife in Steubenville, O., had not been able to do her work for years. She had tried all climates and doctors without relief, is now cured of weakness known only to women. You ask what cured her, faith enough to use a few bottles of Milton's nerve and lung food. You try it. Sample bottle free. Sold by I. Leist. a. 4. 1m.

Seamless boiler tubes are now made from solid ingots of metal by a process that twists and stretches the fibers, and is said to make a tube much stronger than the ordinary ones.

It is stated that the fossilized hand of a gigantic man recently found at Kearney, being broken open, was found to contain a number of diamonds.

Hungry Tollerers in a Land of Plenty.

(Portsmouth Times.)

This country is overlooked with breadstuffs and food of all kinds. The crops of wheat, and corn, and all kinds of vegetables and fruits, have been abundant. Our store houses are full to overflowing. These products are selling low in the markets; so low that farmers can scarcely sell their crops for enough to meet their expenses. And yet workmen and their families are starving in Indiana and in Illinois. Cries of hunger and distress come from the homes of thousands. The huts of strong-armed miners are abodes of penury, and want, and starvation. All over the rich coal and iron fields of Pennsylvania gnawing poverty broods like a hideous nightmare.

Plenty of food, cheap food, but no work, or at least no adequate wages with which to supply the necessities of life.

The honest toiler is hungry in a land of plenty. His children cry for bread.

The wage-workers down, the Carnegie's up.

The "Home Market"—the off-spring of "protection"—in full blast, but no purchasers. The starving miner can not buy the farmer's products no matter how plenty and how cheap, and the marts of the world are closed against him.

Mills are closing down, factories are idle, wages are reduced, lock-outs are common, and from all over the country come tidings of business depressions and the prostration of trade.

The ante-campaign cry of "Hurrah for Harrison and good times!" sounds like a mockery; it falls upon the ear of labor like discord on the ear of love.

Read the banners, "Protection and high wages," carried around last fall in processions amid inspiring music, and rich lights, and waving flags, and songs, and cheers. Now one recalls them as ghastly inscriptions fitted for deserted banquet halls, whose hope and joy had fled.

The past year has proved thus much: That protection does not protect labor.

That it does not protect the farmer.

That it does not create a home market.

That it is the handmaid of exacting trusts and greedy combinations.

The country is tired of the Republican policy: it is sick of the robber tariff.

A Family Gathering.

Have you a father? Have you a mother? Have you a son or a daughter, sister or a brother who has not taken Kemp's Balsam for the throat and lungs, the guaranteed remedy for the cure of coughs, colds, Asthma, croup and all throat and lung troubles? If so, why when a sample bottle is gladly given to you free by any druggist and the large size cost only 50c and $1.00.

Evening Dress.

A gentleman riding along a country road after a heavy rainfall, came to a rickety old cart and a horse to match the vehicle stuck fast in the mud. The driver was an elderly negro; by his side sat his wife, and behind them were seven or eight little pickaninnies of all ages. All were drenched out in a great variety of faded and second hand finery, but all were barefooted.

The man stood up and belabored the poor old horse, urging it on to the impossible task of pulling the cart out of the mire.

"The horse can't start the wagon while all of you are in it," said the gentleman. "Why don't you get out and lighten the load?"

"Cause, sah," was the reply, "we's all gwine to a party, sah; en we's got our feet washed speshly for 'tation, sah; en we can't git out in de mud en den go on lookin' like nobody?"—Youth's Companion.

The Poor Tree.

The local department of this paper fell out of a cherry tree Monday evening, or rather sailed out of it on a broken branch, which was not equal to holding the combined weight of local and a gallon of cherries in a tin pail. No injury was done, except to the tree.—Ashland (O.) News.
